The Gullible Gull

“WHAT does it mean to be gullible?” asked Sammy Squirrel.

“When a person believes everything he is told, no matter how silly it is,” answered Professor Oscar Owl.

“Are we gullible when we believe all the things you tell us?” asked Roger Raccoon.

“No and yes,” smiled Prof. Owl. “You’re not gullible, when I tell you the Facts, but if you believe my Fancy Stories, then you are.

“For example, if I tell you that the Sea Gull is a bird that flies and swims, usually lives near the sea-shore, and often follows ships for miles, and is often seen hundreds of miles inland, then you can believe me. Those are Facts. But when I tell you a Fancy Story about the Gullible Gull, then you should know that it doesn’t have to be believed.

“The Gull I mention was named Shorty, and this name was given to him by the folks who brought him up.

“Shorty started having adventures before he was hatched, which explains the things that happened to him later.

“His parents had made their nest on a high sloping cliff near the sea-shore. One day, his mother tripped as she entered the nest, and spilled it. Out rolled the egg from which our hero Shorty was soon to be hatched. End over end it went down the sloping rock, with Mrs. Gull running after it. But it gathered speed, and before she could stop it, over the edge it dropped.

“It landed kersplash in the water fifty feet below, and just missed a penguin who was swimming there. The egg bobbed up to the surface, and the penguin saw it. He grabbed it gently in his beak, and brought it home to Mrs. Penguin, several miles away.

“Do you suppose we could adopt this egg?” he asked.

“Why not?” said she. “Our little Priscilla will like company, I’m sure.”

“You mean—our little Percy,” said the father penguin.

“Well, we’ll see,” said Mrs. Penguin. “After all, we shouldn’t name our child before it’s hatched.”

“So Mrs. Penguin placed the new-found egg beside her own, and in a couple of days they both hatched out.

“Mr. Penguin strutted around proudly, for he had been right. The baby penguin's name was Percy. As for the other one, they called him Shorty, because he was so small.

"Pretty soon, they were big and strong enough to go for a walk together all by themselves. By this time, they were almost full grown, but Shorty only came up to Percy's knees.

"As Percy and Shorty strolled along the rookery where hundreds of the penguins lived, they were greeted with shouts and laughter.

"'Look at the ugly duckling,' said one penguin, pointing at Shorty.

"'It is not,' said another. 'He's an albatross.'

"'Oh—no,' said another. 'That's a pelican.'

"'H'm,' another said. 'I guess I know a goose when I see one.'

"'Looks like an emu to me,' said another.

"By this time, Percy Penguin was angry the way they were kidding Shorty, and he wanted to take him home. But Shorty didn't mind their talk, because he was anxious to learn. So he stayed and talked with the penguins, while Percy went back home.

"The penguins soon found out that Shorty believed anything they told him, and fed him all kinds of stories and fibs. Finally, they told him that the world was round!

"Now the funny part of it is that the penguins really thought that the world was flat. When they told Shorty that it was round, they thought they were only fooling him.

"Shorty went home, and asked Mrs. Penguin what kind of a bird he was, anyway.

"'Well,' said she, 'I couldn't say for sure, but I'd guess that you were a gannet. Anyhow, you can fly if you want to. That's more than us penguins can do.'

"Shorty stretched out his wings, flapped them, and sure enough he took off into the air. He came back, and asked Mrs. Penguin:

"'Is the world round or flat?'

"'It's flat,' said she.

"Shorty didn't know what to believe, so he made up his mind to find out for himself. He practised up on endurance flying, and one day he said good-bye to Percy and the other penguins.

"'I'm going to prove whether the world is round or flat. I'm going to fly around it. Also, maybe I can find out what kind of a bird I am,' said Shorty, and off he flew.

"But Shorty soon got confused, and like a person lost in the woods, all he did was fly in one big circle, a thousand miles wide. And sooner or later, he was bound to come back to the place he had started from.

"And he did. He also found out that the world was round, and what kind of a bird he was," concluded Professor Owl.

"But," said Sammy Squirrel and Roger Raccoon.

"His own mother told him. For when Shorty swooped down from the sky, he overshoot the place where the penguins were, and landed on the very rock he had rolled off when he was still an egg.

"'Where have you been?' asked Mrs. Gull.

"'I've just flown around the world to prove that it is round,' said Shorty.

"'You didn't have to do that,' said his mother. 'The sun and moon are round aren't they? Well, so is the earth. You certainly are a Gull.'"
